When quality matters, trust Jewel Cabinet Refacing Maple Lake business celebrating 25 year Anniversary

By Brenda Erdahl

Twenty-five years ago, Scott Bohn set out to find a better way to reface a kitchen. The project he was working on was in his own home. A phone call from a big box store, followed by an in-home estimate complete with a high-pressure sales pitch and high price left him dissatisfied and looking for a better solution. With a background in custom cabinetry, Scott knew he had the skills to come up with a better, higher quality method for less money. His first refaced kitchen was his own and it added considerable value to his home when it came time to sell.

In 1999, Scott and Julie Kreitz decided to share Scott's skills with the world. They opened Jewel Cabinet Refacing in a pole building on Scott's parent's property. Eventually, the company outgrew its location and moved to its current shop on First Street in Maple Lake. That was in 2007. In 2017 they opened a showroom at 66 Birch Avenue South. Their shop on First Street continues to be their manufacturing facility.

Jewel Cabinet Refacing is a family run business. In addition to Julie's full-time commitment, Scott's son, Andrew and daughter Stephanie have both worked for the business over the years. Stephanie, who still works part time for them, has played a "huge role" in its success, Julie said.

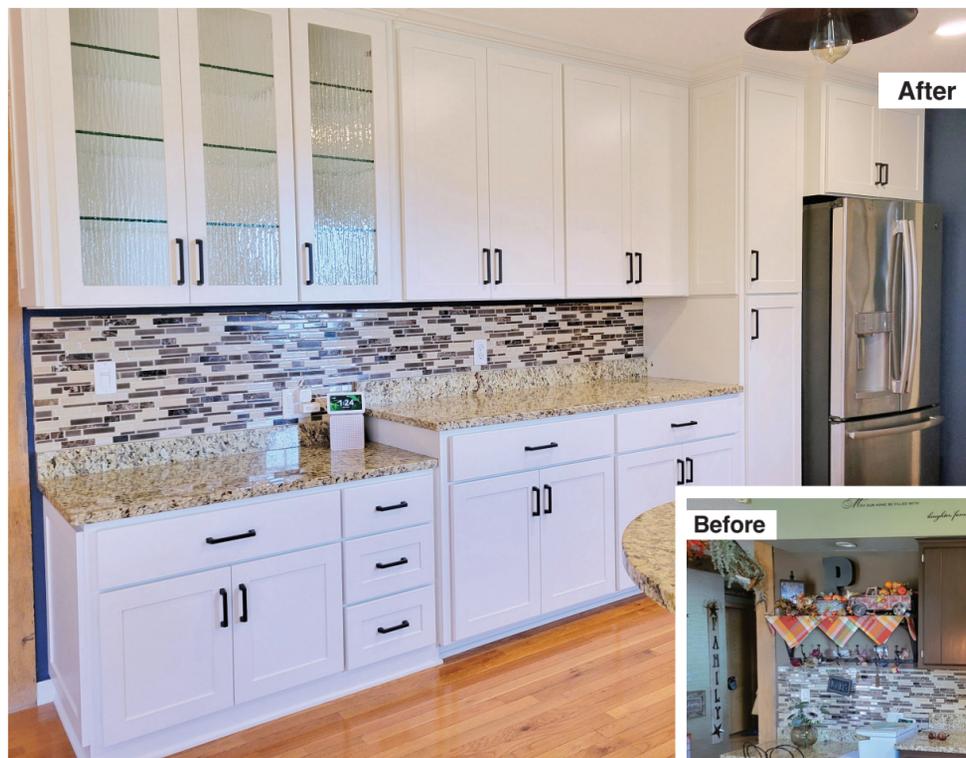

Julie and Scott, owners of Jewel Cabinet Refacing in Maple Lake will treat your kitchen as if it were their own, from the bidding, design and finish work to the final installation.

Refacing Cabinets

Refacing your cabinets can give your kitchen a whole new look without the cost of a full kitchen remodel. Jewel Cabinet Refacing uses two different high-quality processes:

Wood Refacing: Your cabinets will be covered with solid 1/4 inch wood facing, end panels and new moldings. Brand new doors are then applied with new hinges and hardware. Since everything is covered or replaced you can choose the door style, stain color and wood species that fits your decor. To finish the wood, Jewel Cabinet Refacing uses a professional spray booth to apply three coats of high quality, pre-catalyzed lacquer. A light sanding between each coat ensures a smooth durable finish.

Before and after images of a recent kitchen refaced by Jewel Cabinets using the RTF method. The picture at left shows how Jewel Cabinet refaced all the base cabinets, saving the existing granite tops. Soffits were torn out and Jewel Cabinet built all new upper cabinets to the ceiling, plus they added upper cabinets with glass doors, glass shelves and lights inside. They also made many modifications to the existing base cabinets. The desk is no longer a desk, and they added all new drawers, eight new rollouts, a new trash rollout and much more.

Painted Look -RTF process: If you prefer a painted look over a wood finish, Jewel Cabinet Refacing will professionally paint your cabinet boxes and then apply brand new RTF doors to match. Rigid Thermal Foil (RTF) is a process where heat and pressure bond a PVC film to a substrate, creating a very durable and low maintenance material that emulates real painted wood surfaces. By using electronically color-matched, high-quality paint, your cabinets will come out with a beautiful, professional finish.

To view some before and after refacing pictures, visit www.jewelcabinet.com or call 763-286-3232 for more information.

Other Services

With the refacing process Jewel Cabinet Refacing can also modify existing cabinets or add custom cabinets to match. Examples include new drawers, rollouts, trash/recycling stations, wine racks, glass doors and much more.

Looking to get new counter tops? Jewel Cabinet Refacing has a great relationship with two local counter top companies, Northstar Granite and S&R Laminates, so your kitchen project can move forward seamlessly. On the other hand, if you love your counter tops, but know something needs to be done about your cabinets Jewel Cabinet Refacing can reface without removing your present counter tops.

Because they are a custom cabinet shop, customers often focus on kitchens, but they can do a whole lot more than that. From custom built bookshelves, fireplace surrounds, entryway cabinetry, laundry room makeovers and bathroom remodels, Jewel Cabinet Refacing is not limited to kitchens. Ask about grouping multiple projects to save you money in the long run.

The better choice

Over the last 25 years, many customers have found Jewel Cabinet Refacing to be the better choice.

The George family stated: "We're thrilled with the refacing you did as well as the new construction that blends seamlessly. We couldn't have afforded a kitchen remodel if we hadn't found you."

Others have called Scott and Julie's work, "absolutely gorgeous," and have attested to the company's honesty, sincerity, and sense of commitment.

Jewel Cabinet Refacing has earned an A+ rating from the Better Business Bureau, has a long list of referrals and is fully insured. They offer quality products and materials along with the highest quality workmanship and attention to detail. For more testimonials, visit www.jewelcabinet.com.

In good hands

Jewel Cabinet Refacing has refaced more than 500 kitchens since

This kitchen was refaced by Jewel Cabinet Refacing, using their quarter-inch solid wood refacing method.

Showroom by Appointment

Words and pictures can only do so much, which is why Julie and Scott encourage customers to visit their showroom in Maple Lake. There you will see extensive displays of door samples, space utilizing options and hardware choices. Compare the wood varieties, touch and feel the finish and explore what they have to offer. Showroom visits are by appointment only. Call or text 763-286-3232 or email via their website, www.jewelcabinet.com to set up a time.

Parade participation soars in Maple Lake

By Brenda Erdahl

The 47th annual Maple Lake St. Patrick's Day Parade drew its largest crowd in at least two years despite blustery winds, Saturday, March 16.

Although organizers were hoping for temperatures closer to what we experienced earlier in the week, the weather was certainly better than last year when a measurable amount of snow fell and the year before when the high was just 15 degrees.

Temperatures were still above average for March and sunshine was plentiful when the green took to the streets in downtown Maple Lake. The early spring-like weather attracted what organizer Nick Pawlenty estimated as thousands of people. Crowds of people, in spots rows deep lined Division Street to see the 87 units that made up this year's parade. The number of parade units was another above average turnout, Pawlenty said.

"The sun made the day very bearable despite the wind and it seemed to bring a lot more people out. A lot were just in sweatshirts along the parade route. Very happy with what we got," Pawlenty said.

ST. PATRICK'S DAY PARADE IN MAPLE LAKE. Crowds of people several rows deep lined Division Street along the parade route in Maple Lake Saturday, March 16 to celebrate St. Patrick's Day. Mark your calendars for next year's celebration on Saturday, March 15th.

Some of the highlights of the parade were Grand Marshal Marilyn Groth and her Groth Clan entourage, the 2023 State Amateur Baseball Champions the Maple Lake Lakers who broke out the champagne for the occasion, the always popular Osman Shrine Mighty Mites and calliope, the Freedom Flight hot air balloon engine and the many ambassadors from communities near and far whose St. Patrick's Day decorations brightened the parade route. It was announced later at coronation that the Monticello ambassadors won the prize for best dressed in the parade.

"Gear-Head Get Together also had a unique vehicle out that I think is dependent on weather so very cool to see that," Pawlenty said.

As with all big events, there are a lot of people behind the scenes working together to make the St. Patrick's Day Parade a success.

As part of the festivities, Maple Lake's 2024 royalty were crowned, and hundreds of people took part in the Irish Scamper 5k to raise money for the high school track and field and cross country teams. The day of fun kicked off with a craft fair. Celebrate St. Patrick's Day in Maple Lake next year, on Saturday, March 15th.

Needed documents to bring to your tax preparer in 2024

Contributed report

April marks a return to warm temperatures, landscapes marked by blooming foliage and perhaps even a colorful flower or two. April also signals tax season, a notion that may elicit different reactions than warmer weather and budding plants, particularly among those who do not anticipate receiving a tax refund.

According to the Internal Revenue Service, the deadline to file a 2023 tax return is Monday, April 15. Individuals who file more complicated returns or those who simply don't have the time to file on their own typically look to tax preparation professionals to ensure their returns are filed correctly and on time. As the tax deadline draws closer, taxpayers who work with tax preparation professionals can make that partnership go more smoothly by ensuring they bring along these necessary documents and details to their appointments.

· Social Security numbers: Individuals who are filing as single or jointly with a spouse will need to list the Social Security numbers of each person on the return. Taxpayers with dependents will need to provide the full names and Social Security numbers of each dependent as well as their own Social Security numbers.

· Identification: A copy of a form of identification, such as a driver's license or passport, also must be included in a tax return. The identification confirms a person's identity and the name on the ID provided must match the name associated with the Social Security number provided.

· Income statements: Tax preparers need a copy of each taxpayer's W-2 form, which employers must provide by the end of January. Taxpayers with more than one job must provide a W-2 from each employer. Additional income statements, such as forms indicating gambling winnings or retirement account distributions, also must be provided to the tax prep pro. Taxpayers who have such income should contact their tax preparation pro prior to their appointment to determine which additional income form they need to file.

Taxpayers who work with tax preparation professionals can make that partnership go more smoothly by ensuring they bring along the necessary documents.

· Tax deduction documents: Tax deductions save taxpayers money, and taxpayers may be eligible for a range of deductions. For example, homeowners who finance their home purchases with mortgages will receive a 1098 form from their mortgage provider each January. That form is a mortgage interest statement that can help homeowners reduce their tax obligations. Donations, student loan interest payments and college tuition costs are some additional potential deductions. Charities, student loan servicing firms and colleges or universities should provide tax deduction documents by the end of January, and taxpayers can turn these forms over to their tax preparation professional so they earn all eligible deductions.

· Receipts: Some expenses are eligible for tax deductions. Taxpayers can contact their tax preparation professional to determine if any medical bills, business expenses, charitable contributions, or additional expenses are deductible. Receipts may be required, and individuals are urged to hold on to any receipts they might be able to use to earn a tax deduction.

Tax season has arrived, and taxpayers are urged to provide all relevant documents to their tax preparers to ensure their returns are filed correctly and on time.

A SPRING-TIME TRADITION: Chasing Crappies

By Jerry Carlson

When the ice has vanished and the days are warming, I find myself thinking about spring crappie fishing. My wife does also as she loves to fish. For us, like many others, chasing crappies in the spring has become a tradition.

There are a number of lakes we like to target in the spring. Several are close to home and a couple are farther away. We don't get to each lake every year, but we do make a point to try several.

On this particular day, we began our search in a large back bay on one of our favorite lakes. The numerous bulrush beds and large expanse of shallow water had been pretty good to us over the years.

The expanse of the bay was both a positive and a negative. Because of the size, there were many possible locations that might hold early season crappies. They were looking for food at this time of the year and the mud bottom and decaying vegetation held a plethora of options for finding invertebrates for lunch.

Although the large size was inviting to hungry panfish, it was a bit daunting in terms of finding a spot that held a school of crappies. The fish never seemed to be in the same spot and it always took time to locate them.

The one big negative on this day was the wind. It was blowing in from the main lake and might be keeping the sun from warming the shallow water.

By sneaking around in the shallows with our trolling motor, we kept as quiet as possible. Spring fish are quite spooky in the clear, shallow water. For this reason, we also made long casts in an effort to fish far from the boat.

We were a couple of hours into the event and all we had to show for the morning were a few small bass. We opted to give up on the bay and moved to a quiet shoreline that had ample sun warming the waters.

In the clear water, we could see a very distinct inside weed line where the emerging weeds ended and a sand bottom began. This edge became our focus as we had caught early crappies in similar situations before. We were only a few casts into our move when we boated our first fish.

Although there were scattered crappies along the inside weed line, we soon learned there were more fish tight to the docks. Casting close to a dock without overdoing it proved to be a challenge. However, we managed and ended up having an impressive outing.

Spring crappies are never a guarantee. Although they often frequent the same areas each year, water temperature and available food can dictate where they will be found. For this reason, anglers need to be flexible. This flexibility means fishing multiple locations or even switching lakes.

It is also important to note that

Chasing crappies in the spring has become a tradition for Jerry and his wife and it's one they look forward to every year as soon as the ice comes off the lakes. Fishing the shallows is a normal part of the game, but you might have to fish multiple locations or even switch lakes to be successful in the spring.

finding crappies by docks is not unusual. Shoreline cover in the form of docks, weeds or even downed trees gives the crappies a sense of security in the shallow water.

Fishing for spring crappies is a tradition in our household. Searching the shallows for active fish is a normal part of the game.

Jerry Carlson, St. Augusta, has fished Annandale area lakes for many years. He is an occasional contributor to the Annandale Advocate.

Annandale Expo is Saturday, April 6

By Brenda Erdahl

The Annandale Expo is gearing up for another showcase day Saturday, April 6 at Annandale High School.

Now in its 26th year, the Expo runs from 8 a.m. to 1 p.m. and includes 70 exhibitors, entertainment, activities and of course, food.

Free to the public, this event has been called Annandale's get-together and draws 1,000 plus people every year.

Considered a "rite of spring" for the community, the event showcases local businesses and organizations. On the business side, shop for your home, cabin, business, hobbies, leisure activities and automotive needs. But first enjoy the Kiwanis Pancake Breakfast, view the Annandale Fire and Rescue trucks, meet the Annandale

Ambassadors and get a health screening from the Lions. The Lions sponsor the annual adult health screening in conjunction with Allina Health and other agencies. The free screening is the perfect time for adults to receive some basic health benchmarks, including blood pressure, cholesterol, and other measures.

After a busy morning, enjoy a lunch courtesy of the local Boy Scouts and let the kids have fun in the bounce house or play an interactive game of laser tag courtesy of Annandale Paintball. There will be numerous other demonstrations and give-aways plus live entertainment from the Annandale Community Band, the Annandale Jazz Band, the Annandale Cheer Team, Maddie Juvland, Pianist and Just for Kix Dance Teams.

The beauty of the Annandale event is that it encompasses nearly all aspects of the community.

"It's more than just for business. It's a community expo," long-time chairperson and committee member Mike Zieska said. "Everybody takes ownership in it because it grows the community.

"It's kind of like an Annandale get-together. It's like a mini Fourth of July. Everybody comes out, in just a few hours, and you get to see all these people in the community that you normally don't get to see. It's fun."

Businesses and organizations may sign up for this Annandale Chamber of Commerce hosted event at www.annandalechamber.org

Pribyl's work opens library art exhibit

By Brenda Erdahl

The architecture and people of St. Paul are what appealed to Maple Lake artist, Ernest Pribyl and so that is what he painted.

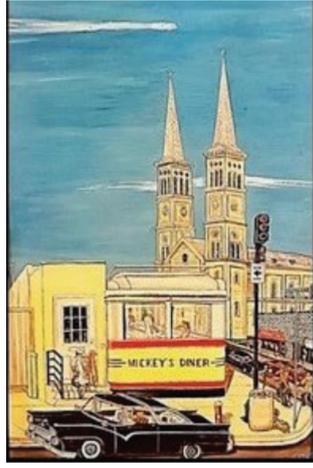

He documented with sure lines and strokes landmarks like the St. Paul Cathedral, Mears Park and Mickey's Diner. He painted for his own pleasure and over the years created quite a collection. In 2020 he passed away and his artwork was inherited by his daughter Jessica Elsenpeter.

This spring, Elsenpeter is loaning her father's work to the Maple Lake Library where his scenic cityscapes and colorful caricatures will be on display from March 4 to May 24th.

Butch Pribyl, as he was better known, was born on Jan. 20, 1945, in Maple Lake to Ernest and Florence Pribyl. He was raised in Maple Lake and graduated from Maple Lake High School in 1963.

He always had a knack for drawing, his sister Deb Norine said and eventually he found his calling as a draftsman in an advertisement on the inside of a matchbook cover.

"In those days, people smoked, and matches were free," Norine

Maple Lake native Butch Pribyl painted this image of Mickey's Diner in St. Paul. It and 13 more of his pieces will be on display at the Maple Lake Library now until the end of May.

recalled. "Companies advertised on the inside of the matchbook cover. A school was advertising for people to apply to become draftsmen, so, he filled it out, mailed the cover to the school, and the school sent him a test that he did and sent back. He was accepted, and then the school would send him drawings he needed to complete and return."

He completed the course that way while living at home in Maple Lake. After passing a final test, he received his certificate to be a draftsman. His first job was at a boat company in Minneapolis, Norine said. From there he went on to draw houses, commercial buildings, and schools. Eventually he was employed at ATS & R Architects and Engineers. His last big job for ATS & R before retiring in 2005 was coordinating the construction of the Wausau East High School in Wausau, Wi.

Pribyl lived most of his adult life in the Twin Cities, including 15 years in a St. Paul high rise close to the Children's Museum. He loved wandering around the city and looking at the buildings, Elsenpeter recalled.

"He would always point out the architecture of a building and was fascinated by them," she said.

Butch Pribyl's drawing of the St. Paul Cathedral is a favorite of his daughter, Jessica Elsenpeter. Pribyl was a draftsman who loved to draw for pleasure famous landmarks in St. Paul.

When his granddaughters earned their learners permit, he was happy to let them collect their driving hours by chauffeuring him around the metro while he looked at buildings and pointed out this and that about the design. It was the safer way to ride with grandpa, the girls often said because he tended to be just as preoccupied by the buildings when he was driving.

Pribyl was also a pilot and a businessman. He learned to fly from Bill Mavencamp Sr for $25 an hour at The Maple Lake Airport and together with his cousin, uncle, and father, they bought their first plane. In 1969, he purchased Salerno Bay Resort on the large peninsula on Maple Lake from Joe Ulrich, which he owned and operated for time. He was also a prolific traveler and "adventurer," according to his sister.

After retirement he spent his winters in Destin, Florida. He loved sunrises and would often text pictures to his family of the sun setting over the Gulf of Mexico, but it wasn't nature that inspired him to paint, it was his love of architecture.

In his collection that will be on display at the library, there are paintings of the James J Hill Library, the Ordway Center, the St. Paul Hotel Landmark and Rice Park, the Historic Hamm Building and the St. Paul Police Station to name a few.

Although not formally trained, Pribyl used his skill as an architectural draftsman to create unique images of St. Paul landmarks from a resident's perspective.

Pribyl's work will be the first of what exhibit organizer Judith Feenstra said will be a year-long effort to display the work of local artists living within the library's service area.

Pribyl's art can be viewed anytime during library hours: Monday and Friday 12-6 p.m.; Wednesday 3-6 p.m.; and Saturday 10 a.m. - 1 p.m.

Sweet steps to making your own maple syrup

By Brenda Erdahl

Breakfast foods like pancakes or French toast just aren't the same without delicious maple syrup. But did you know that many of the syrups found in grocery stores do not contain any maple at all? Pure maple syrup is a marvel of nature and involves a multi-step process for getting this rich liquid from tree to table. For those who want to make maple syrup, now is the time to do it.

When the sap runs

Late winter and early spring are opportune times to collect sap for your own delicious maple syrup. According to the University of Minnesota Extension, sap flows when there is a rapid warming trend in early to midmorning following a night when the temperature gets below freezing.

Mark your calendar

That makes it the perfect time for the University of Minnesota Extension's series of maple syruping workshops. The workshops will be held across the state this spring and one will be relatively close by in Waverly on Saturday, April 13.

This workshop is tailored to the syruping hobbyist. Whether you're looking to get started or looking to fine-tune your syruping skills, this workshop is a great learning tool for small-scale enthusiasts. Educators will lead participants through a session with hands-on demonstrations. You will gain an in-depth understanding of the history of maple syrup, laws and regulations, techniques and equipment for extracting, and processing sap for sustainability.

The budding maple syrup maker or the veteran Sugarmaker wanting to fine tune their skills will benefit from the U of M Extension's syruping workshop series this spring. Register at z.umn.edu/MapleSyrup2024/

Which maple works best

In Minnesota, four species of maple can be used for sap production, although the Sugar maple is the most popular because of its sweet sap. According to the University of Minnesota Extension, you can also gather sap from red maple, silver maple, and boxelder, and you don't need a maple orchard to be a Sugarmaker, as maple syrup producers are called. Trees grown in yards, pastures and woodlands can all be used for maple sap production.

From tree sap to syrup

Maple syrup starts off as tree sap. Maple sap is mostly crystal-clear water that is roughly 2% sugar. The process begins with drilling a tap hole into the tree, then spouts are inserted into the holes to direct the sap into buckets or tubes that will deliver the sap to a collection container for boiling.

According to the Extension Office, you don't need a lot of equipment to produce maple syrup, but a few standard items will increase efficiency and product quality.

A drill with a 7/16-inch bit, collection spouts, spiles or taps, a collection container, a large food-grade stainless steel boiling pan and heat source for boiling down the sap are some of the items necessary. A large-scale thermometer and wool, orlon, or other types of filters for filtering finished syrup while it's hot are also necessary.

Bascom, a maple syrup producer, says maple syrup made early in the season tends to be clear and has a delicate taste. As the season progresses, the syrup becomes darker and stronger in taste.

According to the U of M Extension, sap has an average sugar concentration of 2%. At that concentration, you would need 43 gallons of sap to make 1 gallon of syrup.

Maple syrup is a product of nature. Although there is a short window of time for syrup production, the results are a sweet treat that makes breakfast, dessert, and other meals that much more flavorful.
